After 18 Months, 18 Days

Entry of 4 Into EEC Is Fully Negotiated

BRUSSELS, Jan. 18 (Reuters) —After 18 months and 18 days, the Common Market entry negotiations ended today when Norway and Ireland tied up all remaining loose ends with the Six at brief separate Britain concluded its negotiations with a celebration champagne party at 2 a.m. (0100 GMT) today. Denmark had last Friday become the first of the four candidate countries to complete entry taken. The close of negotiations came only four days before Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway will sign the treaty of accession to the European Economic Community. It is now certain that the 700page treaty with its related documents will be ready for Saturday's

According to one delegate, the treaty is a document "of amazing complexity and unintelligibility." Prime Minister Edward Heath will lead Britain's delegation at the signing and the Irish and Danish premiers will also be there. Norway and the six present Common Market members will be represented by their foreign ministers

Entry Jan. 1, 1973

Signature of the treaty will enable the four candidates to enter the community on Jan. 1, 1973. But Ireland, Denmark and Norway all face referendums on the entry question and the treaty must also he ratified by the national parliaments of all concerned

Although Norway successfully cleared the last major obstacle in its negotiations—fishing rights—early Saturday, there remained some doubt today whether the Oslo government will be able to get necessary parliamentary and electoral approval for entry.

[United Press International reported the possibility that Norway's minister of fisheries, Knut Hoem, would retire because of his disapproval of the negotiated fishery arrangement.

[Norway originally demanded a special protocol with a legal guarantee from the Common Market that the 12-mile fishery zone would be reserved for Norwegian fishermen after the transitional period of 10 years. The negotiations resulted in a protocol that gave political assurance that the Norwegian fishermen's economic future will be safeguarded.

[According to UPI's sources, the minister considers this promise as too weak for Norway, the No. 1 fishing nation in Europe.
[The Norwegian fishermen's union yesterday flatly rejected the accord, UPI said.]

15-Minute Meeting

Today's final session with the Norwegians in Brussels took only 15 minutes. The 17th meeting at the level of deputy negotiators, it was devoted to arranging a timetable for phasing oot Norwegian compensatory taxes on milk, cream and butter imports from the EEC. [The Associated Press reported that Soeren Sommerielt of Norway and the EEC negotiator involved, Jean Dodelinger of Luxembourg, agreed that for a transitional period Norway can levy a special tax on such imported dairy prodocts. This tax will make Norwegian farmers' prices competitive domestically with price levels in the Six next Jan 1. [The tax is to be reduced by one-sixth next Jan. 1 and each successive year, being abolished in 1978.]

Hanoi's MiGs Fire 3 Missiles At F-4s Over Laos, But Miss

SAIGON, Jan. 18 (Reuters) .-North Vietnamese MiG-21s fired three missiles at American jets over Laos but missed, American military spokesmen said today. A brief dogfight was fought out in a border region about 110 miles from Hanol yesterday. Two MiG-31s attacked two F-4 Phantoms, the spokesman said. He would not comment on reports that the U.S. jets were escorting

B-52 bombers. He said the MiGs raced back to North Vietnamese territory before the U.S. jets could get in position to launch missiles. The F-4s had gone into tight diving turns to avoid the enemy missiles. Both pilots of the American planes saw their attackers, which at one point were within two miles of the Phantoms. : 3d Incident in Month

It was the third time in the past mooth that American and North Victnamese planes have clashed over Laos and followed a series of air incidents which began on Dec. 18, when a U.S. jet was shot down by MiGs.

In other air activity. B-52 bombers pounded targets in Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam. The B-52 missions in Vietnam were all in the Central Highlands region, which military officials believe will be the target of a guerrilla offensive soon.

Korean Troops in Action South Korean troops launched a wide-scale operation on Jan. 3 in an attempt to blunt the offensive, it was reported today. A spokesman gave Korean casual-ties as 21 killed and 42 wounded. and said documents had been captured showing conclusively that a large-scale offensive was planned in the near future.

A U.S. communiqué also reported the loss of an AH-1 Cobra helicopter guiship shot down yesterday $5 miles northwest of the central coastal city of Qui Nhon. The two U.S. crewmen escaped injury in the crash.

In Saigon, guerrillas set off a box of hand grenades in a police truck parked inside a compound housing South Vietnamese and U.S. television stations today. sparking explosions and a fire. At least one Victnamese was killed and six others injured, police said.

Collision in Tonkin Gulf SAIGON, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Seventh Fleet destroyer escort Albert David collided with a North Vietnamese junk Sunday in the Tonkin Gulf, the U.S. command reported today. The command's belated account came after North Vietnam accused U.S. Navy warships of "deliberately attacking" unarmed fishing boats Sunday, sinking two of them, killing nine fishermen and wounding seven.

The U.S. command said seven North Vietnamese survivors were taken aboard the Albert David and "treated for minor injuries."

"Navy ships in the area conducted a search for two other crew members of the junk," the U.S. command added. They were

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UPI).-Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter Seymour M. Hersh said today a secret Pentagon document puts at 347 the number of Vietnamese civilians killed at My Lai in 1968. It also states that about 100 other civilians were massacred at the same time at a nearby hamlet.

Mr. Hersh said murder, rape and arson were common acts committed by the Americal Division, which conducted the My Lai operation. "but there were no 'official' reports of them at the higher levels." He said one U.S. soldier described what happened as "insanity."

In the first of two articles written for The New Yorker magazine, Mr. Hersh said he had obtained a complete transcript of the Pentagon's official My Lai inquiry conducted by Lt. Gen. William R. Peers.

The incident at My Khe 4 would perhaps be just another Vietnam atrocity story if it weren't for four facts: its vital connection with the My Lai 4 tragedy, the American public's total ignorance about it, the total, detailed knowledge of it among the Peers investigators, the Department of the Army and higher Pentagon officials, and the failure of any of these agencies to see that the men involved were prosecuted." Unity Bid Is Rejected By Sheikh Bhutto 'Too Late'

In Offering Helm DACCA, Jan. 18 (UPI).— Shelkh Mujibur Rahman, prime minister of Bangladesh, today rejected President Zulfikar All Bhutto's offer to give the sheikh leadership of a united Pakistan.

"I do not want Pakistan," the sheikh told newsmen when asked to comment on Mr. Bhutto's re-ported offer of the presidency or the premiership of a reunited nation. Radio Pakistan said tha offer was made by Mr. Bhutto in a speech at Quetta yesterday. The radio quoted Mr. Bhutto as saying that he had first made the offer before Sheikh l'ujibur was released from nine and onehalf months' detention in West Pakistan earlier this month.

The sheikh seemed surprised when told by newsmen of Mr. Bhutto's offer. He considered for a moment and then replied: "I do not want Pakistan, Bangle desh is now a reality."

A source close to him said that the Bengali leader regarded Mr. Bhutto's offer as ironic, since the West Pakistan politician had been largely responsible last spring for the refusal of the military regime then in power to accept Sheikh Mujibur as prime minister of Pakistan. "19 Months Late"

The refusal, and postponement of a National Assembly in which the sheikh would have held a majority, led to the civil war and the eventual breakaway of Bangladesh after India's inter-an amnesty freeing thousands of prisoners convicted by courts-martial under the former Pakistani regime. The pardon was granted to mark the country's freedom. The move also was seen as a means of relieving overcrowding in jails caused by the arrest of large numbers of persons accused of "collaboration" with the Pakistani authorities.

The order also commuted other prisoners' death sentences to 14 years' rigorous imprisonment, with provision for special remissions. 'Master Race' Seen Motive

2 in Chicago Held as Plotting To Poison City Water Supply

@ 1972 Chicago Daily News. CHICAGO, Jan. 18 .- Two young men, believed to be organizers of a group which reportedly hoped to form a master race, were arrested Monday night in connection with an alleged plot to poison Chicago's water supply and possibly that of the Fort Sheridan (III.) military complex, At least four other persons were being sought.

Authorities said the alleged plot might have involved much of Illinois and the Midwest. The two men, both unemployed, were described as organisers of a group known as RISE. They were charged with conspiracy to commit mass murder. Boud was set at $250,000 each.

Illinois State's Attorney Ed-ward V. Hanrahan said members of RISE apparently were inoculated or were to he immunized against the disabling effects of bacterial polsonings so they "could survive... to form the basis of a new master race."

Investigation showed, Mr. Ean-rahan said, that RISE allegedly planned to contaminate water filtration plants throughout the Midwest with typhoid and other

Bacterial Bombing Planned The arrests followed an intensive investigation by Chicago police and federal authorities, who apparently learned late last week of the plot to poison the water with bacterial cultures by an aerial bombing.

The chief target of the plot was the city's central filtration plant, just north of Navy Pier on Lake Michigan.

Seized by police were Steve Pers, 18, of Evanston, a suburb north of Chicago, and Allen Schwander, 19, of Chicago's North

They were arrested in Mr. Schwander's basement apartment, which a Chicago police source described as a "war office," where bacterial cultures and quart bottles of botulin organisms (which create a toxin that causes food poisoning) were found. Among the four or more per-

U.S. Icebreaker Captures Soviet Vessel in Chase

JUNEAU, Alaska, Jan. 18 (UPI).—A U.S. Coast Guard ice-breaker selzed two Soviet fishing vessels early today and took the commander of Russia's Bering Sea fishing fleet into custody after he ordered his ship to break and run with a U.S. boarding party

Coast Guard headquarters in Washington gave the icebreaker Storis permission to fire warning shots across the bow of the fleeing factory ship Lamut as it crossed the 12-mile limit of American territorial waters off an Alaskan island and beaded into the open sea. The Russian commander, Vladimir Artemov, surrendered for a second time, however, after a two-hour chase during which no shots were fired. Coast Guard officials said the U.S. boarding party aboard the Lamut apparently was never in danger during the chase.

[The skipper of the Coast Guard icebreaker actually radioed a warning to the fleeing Russian vessel that the Storis was prepared to fire across the Lamut's bows, Reuters reported, He radioed, "Stop or be fired on," Reuters said.1

NATO Raises Package Offer For Malta Bases by £3 Million

BRUSSELS, Jan. 18 (NYT).— million of The NATO Council today agreed on a new package offer to put to ably belo Maltese Premier Dom Mintoff for continued use of Malta's bases.

The offer, to be presented to Mr. Mintoff by British Defense Secretary Lord Carrington and NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns in Rome tomorrow, envisages a total payment for the facilities of around £13 million by NATO countries. This is £3.5 million more than the previous British offer, but still considerably below the £18 million that Mr. Mintoff has demanded NATO officials said that they hoped that tomorrow's talks would clear the way for a final agreement. This would follow from bilateral conversations between Britain and Malta over the details of the agreement. The NATO countries are insisting that if Malta takes up their offer the Maltese government nust promise to exclude Warsaw Pact forces from the island. The NATO countries also do not want Libyan troops to be allowed to use Maltese facilities, and that countries other than Britain should have access to VALLETTA, Jan. 18 (UPI). A pro-government newspaper said today the British intelligence service tried to overthrow Mr. Mintoff "several times."

The Malta News, which strongly supports Mr. Mintoff and his governing Labor party, did not cite the source of its information, but it said the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency knew of the British plans. It said the CIA discounted them.

The Malta News said British intelligence considered two plans for toppling Mr. Mintoff—as-sassination and bribing a member of his government to abandon the party. Since Mr. Mintoff has only a one-seat majority in Parliament, this would amount to a collapse of his government. Stories of both plans have been circulating in Valletta for more than a week.

Beirut Says Israel Plans Occupation

BEIRUT, Jan. 18 (UPI).—President Sulleman Franjieh told Arab leaders Israel may soon carry out a threat to occupy southern Lebanon, the independent An Nahar newspaper said

It published what it said were the texts of a note delivered last week from Israel to Lebanon and a communique the president sent to Arab heads of state immediately afterward.

In his message, the president was quoted as saying Israel wanted to seize a large chunk of south Lebanon and "the signs are she will carry out the threatened within the very near offensive future."

The Israeli note, delivered through the Lebonese-Israeli Armistice Committee, followed increased guerrilla activity in the south and two Israeli ground strikes into the region. Premier Saeb Salam at the time termed the message "insolent" and "unprecedented." An Nahar said the text read: "Strong warning. We ask for complete halt to terrorist activities. If this does not take place then we will have to stay permanently in the region [South Largard in one form or another and this could lead to a mass exodus from the area. This is something against our wishes.

Possibly Tanks and Missiles

The sources said France will provide tenks and possibly groundto-cir missiles. The sources added that the deal has been speeded up following the recent escalation of tension on the Lebanese-Israeli border, and the warning issued to Beirut last week of an Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon to thwart guerrilla operations from that area.

The border area has been quiet for the last few days. The fedayeen reportedly had promised to freeze their activity for the time being. Fedayeen sources had said they would not provide Israel with an excuse to "fulfill her ex-pansionist goals in Lebanon."

No Favors for Candidates, Congressional Leaders Agree

my senator—candidate or not; he responded. The Senate, he said, will proceed with its work with no adjustments to aid the candidates' campaign schedules in the 23 presidential primaries coming up. President Nixon will deliver one

State of the Union message in person before Congress at 12:30 p.m. Thursday and another long-er one, in written form, the White House announced today.

This break with tradition was decided upon, press secretary Ron Ziegier said, because "the Presi-dent wanted to include a good bit of detail in his presentation and this will be included in the supplementary written message. Traditionally, the State of the Union message is written and the President merely reads it before joint session of both houses of Congress. The added message, Mr. Ziegler indicated, will deal with specific legislation including appeals for action on past proposals still pending before Congress.

"It was felt there was a good deal" of unfinished business, and Mr. Ziegler said the President wanted to go into detail on it. Some of this uncompleted business will come up immediately. The House is expected to approve after brief debate tomorrow a Senate-passed compromise bill imposing the first real controls on campaign spending. The bill would limit spending in federal elections to 10 cents per potential voter, with a maximum of 6 cents allotted to TV and radio, Heading the Senate's list for tomorrow is a measure to tighten federal law against job discrimi-nation and to widen its application to include any business or union with more than seven employees or members as well as employees of state and local govern-

Prouty, was sworn in by Vice-President Agnew immediately after the Senate convened at noon. . The Senate adjourned after 26 minutes but the House, which also met at noon, remained in session until 4:25 p.m. Although both Speaker Albert and Sen. Mansfield sought to play down the political implica-tions of election year, it was very much on the minds of some.

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said the large number of Democratic senators seeking nomination "will be bothersome, whether they are present or absent, but we will accomplish some things in this session simply because we have to."

Sen. Mansfield said: The business of the Senate will come first. I think the tone will be set here in the Senate and the House on the basis of what we

When in China—Nixon Gets The Latest (1968) Guidebook

By John Vinocur PARIS, Jan. 18 (AP) .- In Peking, dial 07 for the time and-557 661 for a taxt. A post card costs 43 fen a shot and a pedicab about two mao per kilometer. If you want a bath, there's a public one at 241 Dong Dan Bei Do Jie Street. To get to the zoo, take the No. 3 trolley-bus. If von're under 3 feet 7 inches, you rido free. All this has been communicated to President Nixon, along with a 20-page dissertation on Chinese chess and checkers, maps of the Peking trolley system, a restaurant guide, and thousands of words on Chinese language, history and art. Edited in French

The information comes in an English-language translation of what is called the only modern guide to China, edited in French by Nagel; a Geneva-based publisher. Ragel has sent a copy to Mr. Nixon and said the White House replied that it will be very helpful in the preparation of Mr. Nixon's China trip next month. A spokesman for the publisher naintains that it's doubtful that many governments have any more up-to-date information than the guide. The last French guide to China before the current one was published in 1904, and Nagel says there haven't been any new guides in English, German, or Japanese in the last 40 years. In 1,503 pages, there is a remarkable range of fact and detail, part as trivial as a passage on Niu Jie Street that explains that it is "Ox Street or Cow Street or Oxen Street-the Chinese name does not specify— and is fairly narrow, going from North to South with the northern end running into Guang An Men Da Jie Street, at the Nin Jie Bei Kou Crossroads." Other sections are indispensable: The Chinese yuan, worth about 44 U.S. cents, is divided into 10 mao and 100 fen. So the mysterious pedicab turns out to cost around nine cents a kilometer, a genuine bargain if you can find one because the guide says they are increasingly scarce.

There is a vocabulary list, with a number of translated phraces,

Death Penalty In New Jersey Ended by Court

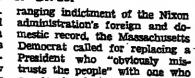

TRENTON, Jan. 18 (NYT) .-The New Jersey Supreme Court struck down the state's death penalty yesterday.

The court ruled that the capital punishment statute in New Jersey was unconstitutional, saving it coerced murder defendants into pleading no defense to escape the risk of ending up in the electric chair if they chose to stand trial before a jury on charges of first-degree murder.

The decision means that the 20 condemned men in the death house at stete prison here will have their sentences reduced to life imprisonment. In fact, this was done yesterday by the court in the cases of 10 of the 20 men who were parties to the appeal. Some of the prisoners will be cligible for parole in about four

Since the death-penalty statute was enacted in the late 1800s, 160 prisoners have been executed. The most famous criminal to dis in the etate's electric chair, which replaced hanging early in this century, was Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the kidnapper of can inspire them. His speech at the Washington Press Chub set the tone for the 1972 session of Congress, which began today a session expected to be dominated by partisan battling leading up to November's presidential election.

Sen. Kennedy, who has for-mally disavowed his possible candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the administration has offered ex-cuses instead of progress" in many vital domestic areas, abdicated its responsibility for civil rights and sacrificed the public interest to that of powerful special interests.

But he saved his strongest rhetoric for Mr. Nixon's record in the international area the record on which the President is expected to rely in his bld for re-

Sen. Kennedy said "the fallure of our Vietnam policy is matched only by the shame of our policy toward India and Pakistan."

"Four years have passed since 1968," he said. "Twenty thou-sand more Americans have died, and still the war goes on. We know that the monstrous bomb-ing will continue. And we know that thousands of soldiers of North and South Vietnam, and tens of thousands of innocent men and women and children, will die in Indochina in 1972, for the simple reason that President Nixon will not allow the Saigon regime to falter until he is secure at home for another term."

He said the present government of South Vietnam "will immediately wash away in the stench of its own inconsequence and incompetence and corruption," once the Americans leave Vietnam. Yet, he said, "it is for this that Americans and Asians still die, for this that American bombs still ravage four small nations, for this that American prisoners still rot in Hanoi."

The senstor said that Mr. Nixon could obtain the prisoners' freedom as easily as he pardoned former Teamster Union president James R. Hoffa last month, by setting a date for U.S. withdrawal

Sen. Kennedy said Mr. Nixon was "intoxicated by the acclaim at home for the magnificent new policy toward China," when he joined Peking in backing Pakistan in the conflict with India over

That stand, he said, "demonstrates... how prostrate toward Peking our policy has become." In ticking off what he called the failures of the administration. on the economy and domestic problems, Sen. Kennedy charged that "you have to go back to the era of Reconstruction to find a comparable abdication by the federal government of its responsibility for civil rights." Presaging a partisan fight on the issue of welfare reform, he said the House-passed administration bill "is primitive in philosophy, pitiless in substance and punitive in practice." If it is approved by the Senate when it comes up for debate this spring, he said, "we shall be creating a permanent new pauper

class, living ... by a meagre, computerized assistance check."

Draft Possibility Seen BOSTON, Jan. 18 (AP).-Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R., Mass., said yesterday he feels Sen. Kennedy would accept a draft as the Democratic presidential nominee.

White House Weighs Dock Strike Move

Settlement Is Still Seen as Possible

WASSINGTON, Jan. 18 (Reuters).—The White House believes there is still a possibility of a settlement in the dock strike which has closed West Coast ports from Mexico to Canada, presidential press secretary Ron Ziegler said today.

He said President Nixon was reviewing all the options open to him. But the spokesran acknowledged that the only course seemed to be legislative action.

The strike lasted 100 days last year bot was stopped when President Nixon invoked the Tait-Hariley Act. This provided for an 80-day return-to-work cooling-off period which ended on

Mr. Bridges, who allowed his men to stay at work until yesterday, said negotiations broke down over a demand for a guaranteed annual wage and a con-troversy over which union would handle containers from ocean

Another stumbling block to a eettlement was the union's demand that any agreements be made retroactive to Nov. 14, the start of Phase 2 of the President's wage and price controls.

Skylab is designed to study the earth and the sun with remote sensing devices and telescopes. The spacecraft will test the use of remote sensors to gather information on the earth's environment, land and water use, agriculture, forests and geology.

The mission is scheduled to start April 30, 1973, with the launch of the unmanned Skylab vehicle. The first crew will be launched the next day. The astronauts will ride into space aboard an Apollo command craft and then dock and board the orbiting laboratory.

At the end of their stay, they will also return aboard the Apollo spacecraft.

Shift Between Cold, Hot Climates A Peril to Aged and Heart-Ailing

By Lawrence K. Altman
NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18 (NET).—A leading medical journs) has warned editorially that sudden moves between cold and warm climates can be "extremely hazardous for elderly people" and for patients with beart disease, the chief cause of death in the United States.

The reasons, the journal said, include the physiological difficulties these people have in acclimating and that "an acute change in environmental temperature may apparently provoke a heart attack in both warm and cold climates."

The editorial in the American Heart Journal was based on several studies that show a sensonal pattern of myocardial infarctions—the heart attacks that generally result from arteriosclerosis. In cold areas the heart attacks peak in winter, whereas in warm areas the peak is in summer.

Scientists do not know what accounts for the ecasonal pattern. Some have suggested that the frequency of respiratory infections, which increases as the weather becomes colder, is a critical factor. Others have pointed out that influenza respiratory infections can be particularly grave for patients suffering from

"Climate is an important but neglected area of medical research," Dr. George E. Burch, who edits the Heart Journal and who has devoted 30 years to research on climate and disease, said in an interview in his office et Tulane Medical

But science must learn more about how climate affects sick people, Dr. Burch said, because as more Americans live longer, perhaps 25 percent are sick at any one time with chronic disorders such as beart disease. Already, Dr. Burch said, it is known that an individual's heart must work much harder when stressed by hot climate.

Traffic Controllers' Walkout Halts Planes

OTTAWA, Jan. 18 (UPI).-Negotiations between members of the Canadian Air Traffic Con-trollers Association and the government treasury board resumed today but neither side could say when it expected a settlement would be reached.

This was the second day of a natioowide strike by 1,60) CATCA members which has paralyzed all commercial air travel—affecting about 50,000 regular air passengers, and halting all air mail and freight. Only emergency flights and cargo flights to re-mote northern communities were operating. CATCA President JR. Campbell, a member of the bargaining team, told newsmen he would soon have some report to make to his membership.

Mr. Campbell said he felt coostrained by the news blackout imposed by the mediator Noel Hall but that the union membersh:p had a right now to know how the

In another move, about 2,200 radar and communications tech-nicians employed by the federal government-including 800 involved in air transport—began a 24-hour work stoppage today. A spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers said the main purpose of the walkout was to test the mood nf the workers before resuming negotiations with the government and before taking a formal strike ballot. The 24-hour strike was not expected to have a serious effect on government opera-tions because most of the workers were involved in maintenance and service of equipment.

Southern Africa Stirs

Africa, the home of so many new states, so many old cultures, is a restless continent. Governments change, often forcibly: alignments among the African countries and between Africa and the world outside shift; there is chronic revolt against the remaining Portuguese colonial regimes, and persistent threats against South Africa and Rhodesia. These last two have known an uneasy, relative, imposed peace within their own borders for some years. But that, too, seems to be troubled again.

In the case of Rhodesia, the new overt frictions between black and white could not be attributed to the proposed new constitution that is intended to permit a settlement between the former colony and its old sovereign in the United Kingdom. The provision for gradual accession to the voting rolls of blacks has disturbed many of the more intransigent whites—and it does not satisfy the more activist blacks. The rioting in Gwelo was directly related to this issue,

However, the etirrings of the Bantu majority in South Africa and the increase of racial tensions in South Africa'e dependencies can at best have only collateral relationships with the negotiations between London and Salisbury, More directly, they would seem to be the inevitable result of apartheid and its implications. Both Rhodesia and South Africa have strong, well-armed white governments-adequate, it would seem, to maintain the status quo against armed uprisings from within or guerrilla raids from without, Yet the very nature of these governments, resting as they do upon a black labor force, is fundamentally unstable.

Workers can be kept on the job by good wages and good working conditions. Or, as in Communist and some other countries, by a sense that they are a part of the state. a part of the process of building an economy in which they have a share. Neither of these prevails in South Africa or Rhodesia -except to the extent that the pay for laboring for whites may make a better life than existing on the fringes of the white economy, under pastoral and agricultural conditions which have lost their real validity in an increasingly industrialized world.

But even this kind of pressure diminishes with time, with an increased realization by the workers of both exploitation and of blatant power.

It was an understanding of this that kept most American slaveholders so resistant to any efforts to ameliorate the lot of their slaves, through education, through giving special opportunities for advancement or freedom to selected bondsmen; through respect for family ties; through legal limits on the owners' control of their slaves. After the insertion of any opening wedges into the strict idea that humans might rightly be held as property, the property-holders could glimpse steadily diminishing productivity and, eventually, the terror of a slave revolt.

The blacks in southern Africa are something more than slaves, but treated as something less than white humans. It cannot work for long in today's world-and perhaps the end is already in sight.

An Unnecessary Fuss Over Malta

economic problem on Malta into the current tense political encounter with heavy strategic overtones. It happened like this: Basically, all Malta has going for it is its location, and its fine harbor. That's why Britain took it over 180 years ago; since then the Maltese economy has risen and fallen on the British naval budget. In recent years, however, Britain has maintained a presence there rather larger than its military needs justified. It has done so for, among other reasons, faithfulness to NATO. At the eame time it has made plain that it would only pay so much for continued base rights.

Malta, unsurprisingly, has long wanted to raise the rent. This was no secret but NATO paid little heed. The result was that: before the Maltese elections last June, NATO did not up the ante by the relatively modest amount it would have taken then to hold the Western position firm. Thus did a tongher bargainer, Labor party leader Dom Mintoff, become the prime minister. In a 55-seat legislature, he won 28 seats; the swing seat margin was five votes.

Exactly as he promised, Mr. Mintoff set out to raise the rent; this is what the current fuss is all about. Using his only available leverage, he has threatened to kick the British out and bring the Russians in. To implement further this admittedly risky pargaining strategy, he has dissolved his Western diplomatic neglect turned a local Parliament (thereby to preclude a challenge by his political opposition) and he has flown in some 40 Arab "technicians" from nearby Libya (thereby to demonstrate that he has an alternative to the British).

The British have nonetheless sat tight, evidently counting on Malta's historical affinity to Britain. on the powerful local bishop's antipathy to the Soviet Union, and on the economic fix Malta would be in if Britain were summarily forced out. As is the West's way in dealing with local politicians who don't easily fall in line, London is practicing a little diplomatic "psywar,". putting out the word that Mr. Mintoff is unreliable and unstable: This of a man whose own pre-independence solution to the problem of British colonialism was to urge Malta to integrate with Britain and take three seats in the House of Commons.

Mr. Nixon has his own perspective. Practically nobody claims that the "loss" of Malta would make much of a military difference but the President is said to fear its psychological impact. So he is reportedly urging NATO to sweeten its offer to Mr. Mintoff, who, to judge by his hints of moderation over the weekend, is responding in turn. To think that the whole unpleasantness could probably have been avoided if NATO had exercised a little foresight a year Or 50 ago.

A Challenge of a Sort to Executive Secrecy

fine and pure, Woodrow Wilson and Lenin both demanded (separately) in 1917 that diplomacy he secret no more and that benceforth all arrangements between nations be written and im-plemented in public view. They got roughly nowhere but since then in various places the idea has recurred that, just as war is too important to be left to generals, peace is too important to be left to diplomate, whether professional or presidential. For many, Viet-nam has confirmed the point.

Our problem is, of course, that the government has taken onto itself such overwhelming means of making and keeping diplomatio secrets, and has acquired such a habit of and vested interest in secrecy, that the public (Congress and press) has had a tough time breaking through. Leaks, authorized and unauthorized, are the kind of breakthrough most in the news these days. That's good enough reason to look at another kind, laws, and in particular, at a bill likely to command important attention in the session of Congress opening next week.

Drafted by Sen. Clifford Case, R. N.J., the bill would require the President to tell Congress within 60 days of any new executive agreement it makes with a foreign country. An agreement which a President deemed sensitive to publish would be transmitted to the two foreign reations committees "under an appropriate injunction of secrecy to be removed only upon due notice from the President." The Senate Foreign Relations Committee anproved the bill unanimously Dec. 7; a similar measure has been introduced in the House.

History and Irony

Students of history (and of frony) will recall that what is here, being advanced as a vehicle of "liberal" challenge to the Executive is in the same split as that old vehicle of "conservative" challenge, the Bricker amend-ment. That was a strenuous but finally abortive effort led by Sen. John Bricker to fend off a per-ceived threat to our sovereignty from such international treaties as the United Nations. Sen. Case has noted that this bill asks no more than did a messure which Sen, William Knowland introduced for the Eisenhower administrationto de-fang Bricker-in 1955, except that Knowland asked only that the Senate be duly informed. Elis bill, passed by the Senate, lan-guished in the House. Case, pre-ventively, asks that both houses be informed.

If the background is old however, the rationale is fresh. Just in the last couple of years, the Syminaton subcommittee brought to public light executive agreements made with Ethlopia in 1960, Lacs in 1968; Thalland in 1864 and 1967, and Korea in 1966, plus secret annexes to the 1953 Spanish bases agreement. The various agreements on storing nuclear weapons abroad, intelligence op-erations, and military "contingency plans" remain highly secret. Just the other day we acquired a new base on Bahrain in the Persian Gulf through an unpublicized and still unpublished executive agreement. Henry Kissinger says: "When I visited Pakistan in January, 1982, I was brief-ed on a secret document or oral understanding about contingencies arising in other than a SEATO

As a world power, the United States makes all kinds of executive agreements; some 4,000 are said to exist. But whatever were the imperatives of the postwar ers of confrontation, in what has been proclaimed as an era of negotiations it surely is fair to ask whether those negotiations are to be secret or open. After all, it was John Bricker's suspicions of war-time dealings with Russis, not the postwar dealings with allies and clients which have lately been of concern, which roused him and many other Americans 20 years ago, and we are now headed into another round of major dealings with Russia, and China.

This administration, perhaps no more than its predecessors, bus been reluctant to tell Congress more than it's had to. It has given itself the benefit of the doubt in deciding whether a given agreement should be called a treaty, nedy, Johnson and Nixon on

But in respect to his admittedly opening-wedge bill, he insists that a Congress kept in the dark or a Congress kept informed only at the Executive'e discretion, cannot exert its full potential in-fluence and cannot discharge its constitutional responsibilities in the foreign-policy field.

Worth the Effort

Surely his is an effort well worth making, and long overdue, but it has its troubling aspects. If enacted, his bill could precipitate a major collision with the Executive: that shouldn't be scary. But to sweeten the prospects of passage and of president-tal signature, the Case bill as reperiod out by the Foreign Relations Committee would not com-pel the President to disclose would let him keep some new agreements secret as long as he notified the foreign relations com-This compromise would make

A President so minded could spare himself congressional (and pub-lic) challenge simply by telling Congress secretly about the new agreement he wanted to conceal. Not too persuasively, Case suggests that the Congress couldwithout exposing correts—use "its constitutional powere of withholding funds," How?

The real basis of Case's dilem-ma, it seems to me, is that he continues to grant the need of some secreta-other than "obvious" operational secrets—in for-eign affairs. But are such secrets necessary? Does a foreign policy requiring socret agreements really euit our national interests?

Each island, with a small popu-lation, limited income and modest industrial potential drifted into the political crosscurrents between Russia and the West, Archbishop Makarlos, Cypriot president from the start, was a neutralist, Malta's Prime Minister Mintoff, who only gained power last year, was some-times called 'The Mediterranean

This is unfair. He simply wants enough foreign money to finance an economic shift so that within five to seven years the island will no longer depend upon rental of its naval-air facilities and dockyard services to survive. This is a logical aspiration but London, logically argues it isn't going to pay through the nose to guarantee its own ouster a few years

This is what the argument is about. Mintoff hasn't helped his own cause by arrogance. When Chancellor Brandt, a fellow So-cialist, offered him a modest West German annual contribution to help the NATO cause, Mintoff told Bonn: "I don't like bad jokes."

There is still a bargaining deadlock British forces continue to withdraw and Mintoff has brought in Libyan and Egyptian technicisms in mufti to run his airfield. The Russians have remained tactfully quiet.

the highest levels of the Nixon administration to try to case out J. Edgar Hoover as director of the Pederal Bureau of Investigation was sidetracked when Pra-ident Nixon himself changed his

The scenario worked out called for a dramatic summit meeting at the White House between President and director in which Mr. Nixon would praise Hoover and then ask for his resignation. The meeting took place, but the President never spoke his lines never asked Hoover to quit.

Now, in a presidential election year, administration officials be-lieve it is too late to dispose a Hoover until after the election Yet, these officials are of the same mind they were in writing last autumn's aborted account. they feel the FBI is in trouble -trouble that cannot be dealt with until Hoover is gone.

Bisarre

This bizarre situation underlines one of the major argu-ments for Hoover leaving: Arie 47 years running the PBI Hoover's independent political power is so formidable that even the President himself shrink from asking him to quit and will not even consider removing him in an election year,

In fact, administration officials are so awed by Hoover's popular support that they will not publicly admit any displeasure at all, Their public position is that the 77-year-old . Hoover can remain as director (1) as long as he wants to and (2) as long as he is physically and mentally capable, adding hastily that both conditions now prevail.

Their private opinion is some thing else. They concede that the FBI has gone downbill as a law enforcement agency and aquarely blame Hoover. Only a new director can reform the hureau, they believe.

Although right-wing groups staunchly defend Hoover from all attacks and leftists regularly demand his dismissal, the question is not basically ideological. Thus, the leading advecate of Hoover's dismissal inside the administration is one of the Justice Department's most militant anti-Communists and law-and-order advocates: Assistant Attorney General Robert Mardian a Goldwater Republican not hitherto accused of liberalism.

Shocked

From the time he took over the Justice Department's Inter-Security Division in November, 1970, Mardian has been shocked at Hoover's autocratic rule of the PBI and his hostfuly against any supervision from the Justice Department. Mardien's disaffection may have reached its peak last spring when Hoover running from responsibility for dealing with the Mayday demonstrations in Washington, barred FBI officials from all the department's strategy meetings.

Moreover, Mardian is well aware of the little known truth about the FBI today: with agents unequaled as law enforcement officers, its present performance is well below what it could be or should be. Far too much attention is spent on arresting petity thieves and catching Army deserters, not nearly enough on domestic intelligence and foreign espionage agents.

Tight Control But worst of all is the shocking state of the bureau's morale. Justice Department officials and U.S. attorneys complain that highly competent agents are stripped of imagination and dar-ing for fear of taking an unusual initiative that might bring a dreaded letter of censure from the ubiquitous director. No agency in the government is widely and closely controlled from the top by a single man.

The result: Most agents, partic ularly those in security work. would welcome a new director even though they subconsciously fear what might happen to the FBI, molded for 47 years in Hoover's image, when the change

But few agents in the field think that time will come soon. The purge of high FRI officials who had been privately critical of Hoover, including some with close contacts in the Justice Department, deeply impressed undfitted and dangerous anmi-potence. They also find the same J. Edgar still making ever President dance to his time. At least until after the 1972 election. President Nixon will keep right on dancing.

The Youth of Wagner In Lyons and Paris

seems to be weighing heavier than ever in French opera sched-ules these days. "Die Walküre" had the honor of opening the season at the Paris Opera, which has now added a revival of "Tristan und Isolde," while the energetic theater in Lyons is now taking its turn with "Walklire." Not only were both performances of high quality and enthusiastically received, but the youthfulness of some of the key participants in both productions suggests that Wagner is not going to fade away for want of future advocates. This was especially and appropriately noticeable in the orchestra pits. Theodor Guschl-hauer, the young Vienness who is the Lyons musical director, reconfirmed his stature with en exciting and moving performance, while in Paris one of his contemporaries, Hans Wallat from Mannheim, persuaded the Opera orchestra to give its best (a few exposed clinkers aside! for the renewal of the Wieland Wagner "Tristan" production.

René Kollo is a real find as Siegmund—handsome, othletic and with a strong lyric tenor. He is a former German pop star who went straight, so to speak, with a performance as the steersman in "The Flying Dutchman" at Bayreuth a couple of years ago, and has since been enapped up for recordings-notably an outstanding Walther in Karajan's recent "Meistersinger." The Paris cast had more known values. Jess Thomas's voice seems to have gained weight and a derker color in recent years, and since he cats a stalwart figure, is an intelligent actor and was in good voice last night, he was as impressive a Tristan as one can find these days; and Ingrid Bjoner was an ettractive, often radiant Isolde.

The youth movement here was represented by Brigitte Fass-baender, the rich-voiced young mezzo of the Munich Opera (daughter of Willy Domgraf-Fassbaender, the pre-war baritone known best through his Glyndebourns Mozart recordings), who was an impressive Brangaene. By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, Jan. 18 (IHT).— Georges Wilson, director of the Theatre National Populaire, is in danger of being mistaken for an English play broker or perhaps a proselytizing English dramatic critic. This week he has brought not one, but two, plays of the "angry" London school to Paris.

"Des Frites, Des Frites, Des Frites" is a translation of Arnoid Wesker'e "Chips With Everything," an indignant outery against the barbaric treatment accorded conscripts undergoing basic training in the RAF. As conscription was abolished in England some years ago, the grim picture presented—of the contempt that officers feel for their men and of the bitter resentment the men hold for their commissioned superiors—is now largely academic. Busby Berkeley. Out of a mouse of a script the director, Gérard Vergez, has ex-tracted a mountain of mise-enscène. The charge of over production may be made, but Vergez's method is to the benefit of the evening. There is no intermission, but the spectacle numbers afford temporary relief from a strained text. The play is second-rate, containing a few firstrate touches: here a deft bit of observation and there a passage or two of persuasive dialogue. Basically, it is the regulation anti-Establishment harangue—the civilian existence of the conscripts being compared to their servitude

The selection of "Savedi" for the TNP poses a question. Was it chosen because it had created a. scandal in London? If so, why did not Wilson, following such a line of logic, import "Sex," by Mae West, which not only creat-ed a scandal in New York, bot brought out the police and landed Miss West behind bars for writing and acting it? "Sex," unless memory fails, was more amusing, as it had Mae as a Riverside Drive siren luring sallors to her boudgir there to engage them in double-entendre repartee, which, if compared to the chit-chat of Bond, might pass as high comedy. The artichoke had also been introduced into California by the Spanlards when they were there, but seems to have departed with them, to return in significant quantities only about a quarter of a century ago. "An improved thistle?" Perhaps before putting the artichoke down as a thistle it might be prudent to ask the question; What is a thistle?" Botanically speaking, the answer is: "The thistle does not exist." It is a popular word, applied indiscriminately to a number of bristly plants which look alika. In its article of "Thistle," the Encyclopaedia Britannica names seven plants, no two of which belong to the same genus. while mone share the genus of the artichoke. Cynara. Artichokes and Nice Girls in the 15th century?" Unknown, then, to the ancient? But the artichoke probably originated in prehistoric or protohistoric times in Sicily, still an important producer of this vegetable. Carthage held parts of Sicily for several centuries, and may have transplanted the artichoke from there; in any case it was cultivated on Carthaginian territory in Africa. It was eaten by the ancient Greeks, assuming that it was the artichoks which was meant by the word kingra, borrowed to name its genus by an age which denied that the Greeks knew it. As early as 500 BC. Romans were eating artichokes, and 200 years later the vegetable is mentioned as one of the possible components of a Roman breakfast. did not like artichekes. He calied them "monstrous productions of the earth," and wondered that Romans could est them "when the very four-footed beasts instinctively refuse to touch them.' When Charlemagne published statuto enumerating the useful plants he wished to have cultivated in his domains, the list included the artichoke. This was several centuries before the time of Catherins de Médicis, usually credited with introducing the artichoke into France. It is certainly probable that if she found none there, she would have imported them from her native Tuscany, where they were cultivated intensively during her time. for she was inordinately fond of them. A contemporary chronicler noted, with a certain lack of medical precision, that on one occasion she consumed so many that she nearly burst.

Whether or not Catherine had mything to do with encouraging the artichoke in France, it began to attract attention shortly after her advent. Rabelsis mentioned it some 20 years after her marriage. The French agronomist Olivier de Serres (1539-1619) wrote that it could be planted at any time in the spring up to the month of May, either from seed or slips, but only when the moon was on the wane. Ronsard (1524-1585) wrote: L'artichaut et la salade, L'asperoc et la pastenade, Et les pompons tourangeaux. Me sont herbes plus friandes Qua les royales viandes Qui se servent à monceaux.

(Artichoke and lettuce,/Asparagus and parsnips./And the tiny Toursine apples./Are plants of which I am more fond/Than the royal meats/Which are served up in heaps).

Public Opinion

In showing her fondness for the artichoke, Catherine de Médicis was flouting public opinion, for in her time it was not considered proper for a woman, especially a maiden or young woman, to eat artichokes, but Catherine was never one to be deterred from anything she felt like doing by concern for what others might think of her. In Renaissance times, the artichoke was described as a "heater," meaning an Provence prefers the small purplish russe artichokes, drawn out into spindle shape, or the vert de Florence, of Italian origin, both of which when young can be caten in their entircty. Alexandre Dumas, who wrote, perhaps inco curately, that "formerly this plant grew only in Italy, but nowadays our gardeners have accilmated it," listed its varieties as "white green, violet, red and sweet. The white, the violet and the green are rich in flavor; the little ones called artichokes for pepper sauce, are seten raw"—with of course, the potential of olive ell vineger and much pepper. Italy also has a wealth of varieties, including medium-sized articholes. with purplish leaves which in color recall those of Provence and extremely small ones which preserved in oil, are exported and can be found in Italian grocery shops all over the world. The Italians even succeed in produc ing large green artichokes which are so tender that the whole plant can be eaten, choke and all.

This is the case for the Jerusalem artichoke, also known as Canada artichoke, winter artichoke and topinambour, which is a sunflower. There are at least three "wild artichokes": the Carline thistle, which is edible; Our Lady's Thistle, which may be if you are hungry enough: and, also edible, the plant called and, also edible, the plant called in French artichaut des toits (not artichoke) or joubarbe, and in English Jupiter's Beard or house icek. The plant the French call the Indian artichoke (artichaut des Indes) is the tuber pomea. The Chinese artichoke, Stachis tuberifera, is no relative of the artichoke either, but its white spiral-shaped roots, whose taste combines those of the Jerusalem artichoke and the radish, can be served in any fashion appropriate to artichoke hearts.

Trophy for a Café in Paris

By Jon Winroth

PARIS, Jan. 18 (IHT);—Miche-Bourgueil, the best of the reds, lin has its stars, Kleber its which is light but deeply colored, typically earthy and yet remarkroosters and the Academic Rabelais has the Prix du Meilleur Pot de Paris. If the first two are Aux Négociants, 27 Rue Lambert, Paris 18. Telephone: 606-15-11. Closed Sundays and in August, but open until past midnight. Prices are reasonable. well known to everyone, the third has a following among the seri-ous drinkers of counter wines in

This year the prize, accom-panied by its trophy, now called the Marcel-E. Grancher Cup in honor of its creator, today retired from active organizing of the award, went to the deserving bistrotier André Tricoche.

The award was overdne, for Mr. Tricoche and his wife Marie-Louise have been delighting the palates and satisfying the thirsts of their 18th Arrondissement clients for more than a quarter of a century.

No wonder, then, that friends, clients and academicians came to celebrate the award last night in such number that the festivities spilled out of his little, oddly named (Aux Négociants—the merchants, which in wine parlance carries overtones of not entirely natural wines) wineshop, to cover the square in front of it with a properly unsober crowd of wine lovers, glass in hand. Two policemen looked on beaming. In other circumstances, the crowd might have been taken to the local stationhouse.

Mr. Tricoche comes from a nonwine region of France and, as a young man, was a tinsmith. The war and its aftermath made things difficult in his trade and he bought a café which at first had nothing to distinguish it from any other. In the early fifties he found a good Aligoté for his Kir (white wine with a finger of crème de cassis) and a fine Châteaumeillant, a fruity rose from near the Source of the Indre. Then he had a chance to make a tasting and buying trip to the Loire.

Somewhere along the line, he developed a remarkable palate and today he makes several trips each year to the areas his wines come from, every one of them chosen personally and shipped to him in the barrel. He bottles them only as he needs them, which insures their fresh, youthful character and he works only with young wines, rarely ever more than a year old.

They are all excellent but a few stand out, especially his

-Irving Marder The Trouble With French Television...

DARIS (IHT).—Is French television the worst in the world, or merely the worst in Europe? The other day, watching a merely the worst in Europe? The other day, watching a pretty speakerine, her dazzling smile undiminished as she read a news bulletin about an airline disaster, many a viewer must have wondered whether his eyes or his ears needed a checkup. Of all the people who read or recite the news on French TV, I can think of only one who measures up fully to professional (i.e., non-French) standards—who gives the impression that he himself grasps what he is talking about the redountable Léon Zibrone. The other—mainly slender young men with artstocratic-sounding names—tend to look and sound like falled actors: they lack the authoritative manner and delivery that actors; the lack the authoritative manner and delivery that are essential for a newscaster.

What also does French TV inflict upon the cringing viewer?

What also does French TV inflict upon the cringing viewer? "Variety" shows that look like (and may be) the ones that killed vaudeville in the United States a couple of generations agoingglers, tumblers, unfumny clowns, fumbling magicians, dog acts, chimpanzee acts; musicals that could be but too obviously are not—paredies of the Hollywood product of the thirties.

Hardest of all to take, perhaps, is the way French TV-presents its movies. One of Fritz Lang's earlier Hollywood mistakes was a recent late-night offering. First a normous intro-takes was a recent late-night offering. First a pompods introduction, of stupefying length, by the resident cinema expert. Then the bomb itself. And then a postmorten discussion in the studio by a panel of experts, solemnly dissecting a film that hever should have been made, let alone disinterred as part of an hommage presentation.

Then there are the quiz shows. These, too, recall the early days of American TV and radio. They were popular with American producers then for the same reasons they are popular now with French producers: They cost next to nothing to produce (there are almost no "talent" costs) and, because they can be prolonged for hours (or days if necessary), they help solve the problem of filling up the program log. But they are incredibly bother, they come to the program to the program of the pr

Is there nothing, then, that French 'FV does well? Yes: Their episodic period-pieces—cloak-and-dagger stuff like Dums. The costumes, sets, even the faces of the actors, from principals Dealers attributed the dollar's Dealers attributed the dollar's rise mostly to short-covering, or selling of European currencies to repay borrowed Eurodollars. In the past several days, the dollar's value has declined, permitting short sellers to cover their posttions at substantial profits. In Italy and Belgium, the can-iral banks also apparently gave the dollar some support, today.

Calmer Activity Reflecting the somewhat calmer activity on foreign ex-change markets, the open-market price of gold declined in both London and Zurich. EEC Expert Warns on Currency Pact Japan Fixes BRUSSELS, Jan. 18 (AP-DJ).

-Raymond Barre, the Common Market's top monetary expert, warned today that the recent international monetary settlement won't be enough, in itself, to cesstablish a better equilibrium in the international monetary system."

Voicing the concern of many European monetary authorities, Mr. Barre said the Washington accord most be completed by three short-term measures of major importance: the return to limited dollar convertibility, agreement on financing the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit and strengthened international controis on capital movements.

"It would be wrong and dan-gerous to think that the Washington accord solved all the problems raised by the international monetary crisis," Mr. Barre said.

"After having been greeted with enthusiasm, the agreement today is considered with great

Mr. Barre, vice-president of the EEC executive commission in charge of monetary and economic affairs, made his remarks in his annual report on the EEC economy to the European Parliament in Luxembourg. The text of his report was released here.

Poor Year for EEC

Mr. Barre said 1972 would be a lackluster year for the REC economy and the international situation would remain delicate. He repeated the forecast published last week that the EEC's gross product would rise only 2.5 to 3 percent this year, down from a 3.5 percent growth in 1971, and he said costs and prices would continue to rise at a high rate. He also said the EEC commission proposal last week to narrow the fluctuation margins among EEC currencies to 2 per-cent from 4.5 percent was an interim measure. The margins should be further reduced to 1.5 percent, the same as they were before the monetary crisis broke out last year, he said.

The commission coupled its proposal on exchange margins with a renewed plea for acceptance of proposals made last spring on capital controls to be adopted by EEC countries. Mr. Barre termed these proposals "economically reasonable, technic-ally possible and politically ac-ceptable."

Many of the proposed controls, such as banning interest on for-eigners' deposits and regulating corporate borrowing abroad, havesome EEC countries. And last week, the EEC's monetary committee supported the principle of narrower exchange margins, although it could not agree whether the margins should be reduced to 1.5, 2 or 2.25 percent.

Action on Dollar

On dollar convertibility, a subject that has assumed major importance among European mon-etary authorities of late, Mr. Barre said the United States could not be asked to make a commitment it could not possibly fulfill, that is, return to full convertibility when foreign central banks possess more dollars than the United States has

More Measures Seen Required

But he said measures should be taken to permit normal operations of the International Monctary Fund by permitting, in certain cases, limited dollar con-vertibility. This was an apvertibility. This was an ap-parent allusion to Britain's re-ported request for gold from Washington to repay a debt to the IMP, which is berred by its rules from accepting any more

Mr. Barre said monetary realignment would not lead to an Export Curbs immediate restoration of a surplus in the U.S. payments ba-lance, and capital outflows in coming months would probably aggravate the deficit.

He said it was "an important and open question" whether this deficit should be financed by new increases in European central banks' dollar holdings or by normal methods of international

He said the need for an international policy to control short-term capital movements was "urgent." Otherwise, the maintenance of stable exchange rates

Hungary Moves to Correct Snags in Economic Reform

By James Feron

BUDAPEST (NYT).—The Hungarian economic reform, introduced four years ago, has run into trouble, but apparently not seriously enough to prompt a revision of the plan. Some changes in the liberal economic program are being made, however, to reverse a negative trade balance and to slow the rate

The goal, in broad terms, has been to accelerate Hungary's transformation from agriculture to industry. It is being accom-plished by introducing incentives on a broad scale throughout

Plant managers are no longer tied to rigid wage policies. They must think in terms of profits, About 40 of the largest enterprises are authorized to deal directly with Western firms and can determine their own investment areas.

The corrections include a stronger role for the national bank in approving all investments outside the budget—a role that the bank used to perform, Leaders of the state bank have been in the vanguard of the reform, however, and observers here do not interpret the bank's new role as representing any more than a cautionary move.

The government has decided, meanwhile, to trim its investment obligations by postponing the start of 20 of the 24 development projects it had planned for this year.

"We are going shead with some chemical plants we are developing with the Soviet Union, but putting off some construction projects," an official said. Hungary spent $40 million on the importation of construction material alone in the last year.

An economist said, "We are also requiring that enterprise maintain a 20 percent reserve in their investment projects. This should prompt a more conservative approach and help our trade balance." He added that "our economy is just a bit overheated, to use a capitalist term, but we are hoping to correct the situation with economic rather than administrative mea-

The state of the Hungarian reform is a matter of considerable political as well as economic importance in Eastern Europe because it is felt that, as Budapest goes, so goes the Previously the state planned almost everything and regulated all aspects of the economy. Now the enterprises and their managers make their own plans, operate flexible wage systems and think in terms of profit. Premier Jenoe Fock said in October that the problems developing within the plan, especially the trade deficit, could be attributed in part to floods and a bad harvest. But he added man factors entered into it. A Western diplomat explained:

Hungary just overspent. They also found that some projects had been planned hastily, and some have since been abandoned. They also invested hard currency in projects that would be sold locally earning only soft currency.

"The reform enabled people to get their hands on hard currency and it produced a free-for-all. Some directors made investment commitments, ran short and then made more commitments with the idea that more funds would be forthcoming." A Hungarian economist said that the state had intended to maintain greater control over the amount invested by the "private sector," or major state-owned enterprises, by regulating credit. "But the state had underestimated its own investment requirements, leaving fewer funds to offer for credit and there-fore exercising that much less control," he added.

But Premier Fock, in his October speech, stated clearly that there would be no turning back to the pre-reform policy of

Link Creates Third-Largest Steel Firm

DORTMUND, West Germany, Jan. 16 (AP-DJ).—Close cooperation short of an outright merger, between Hoesch of West Germany, and Hoogovens of the Netherlands, will create the third largest European steelmaker, Friedrich Harders, Hoesch chairman, said today. He emphasized that "the rationalization gains" from the step "will be enormous." He did not make any exact projections, though.

Hoesch and Hoogovens had combined 1970 crude steel output of 11 million tons. British Steel Corp. produced 25.7 million tons and August Thyssen-Huette 13.2 million tons, Mr. Harders noted.

Spending Rises in U.K. But at Slower Pace

LONDON, Jan. 18 (AP-DJ) .-Consumer spending in Britain continued to rise in the last quarter last year, though at a slower rate than the three previous quar-ters, the Central Statistical Office said today.

Spending rose £80 million to £6.16 billion (at 1963 prices) from the third quarter, compared with rises of £94 million in the third quarter and £135 million in the second quarter.

Sources explained that the slower growth rate was caused by special factors. The second quarter rise followed strikes at the post office and at Ford Motor Co. that limited consumption in the first quarter. The third-quarter increase reflected the government's cut in purchase tax and elimination of control over time purchase contracts.

For Steel Growth of Shipments To U.S. Set at 2.5%

By John M. Lee TOKYO, Jan. 18 (NYT).-The Japanese steel industry has wrap-ped up a new three-year program to curb the growth of its U.S.

In confirming this today, Tadayoshi Yamada, the chief delegate in negotiations with the U.S. State Department, said that the formal aunouncement awaited the conclusion of a similar U.S. agreement with European producers, which is currently being However, even if there is no

European agreement, Japan will proceed on its own. "Japan will go ahead," said Mr. Yamada, "out of its desire to contribute to the reduction of the deficit figure in U.S.-Japanese

The new "voluntary" agreement, which will take the form of a letter of intent, follows an earlier three-year agreement for 1969-71. Quota Target Exceeded

Exports last year exceeded the quota target of 5.75 million metric tons of steel mill products by some 20,000 tons.

The overall growth rate was to have been 5 percent a year. How-ever, exports of high-priced spe-cialty steel products in 1970, for example, grew by 50 percent.

The new agreement provides for only a 2.5 percent annual overall growth rate, but includes specific quotas for stainless steels. tool steels and other alloy steels. No shifts of unused quotas from one category to another are to be permitted. In addition, quotas for specialty steels are to be reduced annually so that in 1974 the exports of these items will be 55 percent less than in 1970. Although Japan's steel exports were up 33 percent, crude steel output fell for the first time in nine years, to 88.6 million tons, a drop of 5.1 percent. Japan was the world's third largest steel producer last year, following the Soviet Union and the United

Morgan Cuts Prime Rate to 43/4 Percent

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (Reuters). -Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. today reduced its prime lending rate to 4 3/4 from 5 percent.

Morgan is the first major bank with a fixed prime rate to move to the 4 3/4 level for interest it charges preferred borrowers. First National City Bank, Irving Trust and Bankers Trust have already cut their floating prime the rate has been since late 1965. Money market experts have speculated for several days that a cut in the discount rate—the percent rate charged banks on loans from the Federal Reserve—is imminent.

rates to 4 3/4 percent—the lowest

The Dow Jones industrial average rose steadily during the morning and reached its peak for the day at 1 p.m. with a reading of 919.02, up 7.9. Then it slipped downward slightly and closed with a gain of 6.1 at 917.22, its highest closing level since last Sept. 8. Trading was heavy throughout the session. Volume soared to 21.07 million shares, up sharply from 15.26 million yesterday. Of the 1,752 issues traded, 923 rose and 576 fell, while 253 closed unchanged. Ninety-three stocks touched 1971-72 highs and only five hit lows.

Airline stocks again were all over the ticker tape and domi-nated the list of the day's most active issues. Braniff traded 170,600 shares and closed up 1.2 at 16 1/2. Pan Am finished up 1/4 at 16 3/4 on 154,700 shares and American climbed 7/8 to 43 on turnover of 134,500 shares. Eastern ran counter to the trend, dipping 1/8 to 24 5.8 at the close on 134,400 shares, nl-though it traded as high as 25 1/2 earlier in the session. number of Wall Street houses have put out bullish reports ou the airline industry or on individual airline stocks.

A 28-page report by Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis coucluded, for example, that "the time has come for accounts seeking intermediate to longer-term price appreciation to increase selectively commitments in airline stocks." Giamours were also leaders.

Corning Glass climbed 51/4 to 193 1/2, Levitz Furniture at 153 1/8 was up 25/8, Disney at 1481.4 was up 27/8, Polaroid was 975 8, up 13/8 and Eausch & Lomb surged 83.6 to 1767/8, after trading es high as 123. Bausch & Lomb said that 1971 operating profit soared to $2.43 a share from a restated $1.70 a share a year earlier. Stocks ended higher on the American Exchange. The ex-change index closed at 26.74, up .08. Advancing issues led declines to 7.71 million shares from 5.96 million yesterday. Tyco Labs was the most active issue, falling 1/2 to 17 5/8 on 318,900 shares. Ozark Air Lines, which has been active for the last three sessions, rose 3/8 to 10 7/6 on 124,300 shares.

553 shares to 441. Volume rose

On the bond market corporates reversed direction following the prime rate cut by Morgan Glaranty to close 1/8 to 1/4 point higher on the day. At their lows they were off 1/4 to 3/8 point. Government intermediates closed 1/8 to 3/8 point lower.

There was considerable anxiety in the fourth quarter of the year about whether agreement could be reached no international eschange rates in time to prevent the general uncertainty giving rise to recession in Europe and Japan. Another major cause for concern was the possibility that the prices and jocomes policy adopted under Phase 2 of the President's New Economic Policy would damage profit margins by keeping prices more effectively controlled than wages. These worries were reflected in the stock market, where the Dow Jones Industrial Average dipped briefly below 800. The first problem has been much reduced by the agreement reached in Mid-December. While many issues still remain to be negotiated, that agreement was a major step forward and progress is expected on the outstanding issues. The worst fears about Phase 2 also appear to be unfounded, 25 the Prices Board has shown itself to be flexible and reasonable. Accordingly attention should again be focused on the improving economic scene in the United States. Housing and retail sales are strong, the consumer has considerable liquidity, and there appears to be a general mood of greater confidence. Since invectories are low it now appears likely that business spending, which was a weak factor in 1971, may turn up quite sharply. Unemployment is still high, which suggests that the progress already made against inflation may continue. Since capacity utilisation is low the situation is one in which greater economic activity ought to have an excellent effect upon corporate earnings. Share prices are putting a low multiple on expected earnings. The American public may be expected to come back into the market as confidence in the economy teturns. European investors, inhibited in recent months by exchange rate problems, should also be investing in the United States again, particularly as prospects in Europe appear somewhat uncertain.

Your Board is therefore optimistic and the Trust is highly leveraged. The situation remains under constant review and the marketability of the holdings is such that the leverage can be quickly eliminated if that appears wise.

A player who has a massive fit for his partner can afford a jump lower in rank, since he can always revert to his partner's suit without raising the level.

With the vulnerability in his favor, East bid his diamond suit at the four-level, mindful of the possibility of an eventual sacrifice. South allowed this to go round to his partner who chose a cue-bid of five diamonds, perhaps because he was unsure about how many spades to bid. South interpreted this to show a diamond control and a spade fit, and showed confidence in his interpretation by jumping to six spades on the strength of his club control. He might instead have cue-bid six clubs, allowing for the slight chance that North's activity was based on a solid heart A glance at the diagram shows that, barring some belp from the opponents, the slam is doomed by the duplication of distribution in the heart and club suits. After a black-suit lead South's only legitimate chance is to play for a strip and endplay, leaving one of two improbable situations; a singleton heart king, a 1 percent chance; or a doubleton kingqueen of hearts, a 1 1/2 percent chance. And he cannot play for both. West led the diamond two, and that was that, South quickly discarded a heart from the dummy, a loser-on-loser play, and the dismond ace was the only trick for the defense. The dismond king took care of the remaining heart loser in the dummy. "You could have led any other

VOYEUR VOYANT

A Portrait of Louis-Ferdinand Céline By Erika Ostrovsky, Random House, 395 pp. Illustrated, $10. Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

recommendation to banish the poets from the Republic, the career of Louis-Ferdinand Céline provides it. Admittedly, it seems an inappropriate time to make the point. Even before his death in 1961 (on the same day as Ernest Hemingway's, which may explain why few Americans took notice at the time). Céline had been apotheosized in the Pielade library of French classics. In the decade since, his reputation has grown apace. He has been celebrated as a son of the French language, a brother of no less than Diderot and Rabelais, and the father of practically everything from William Burroughs to the Beat Generation to Black Humor. And with the current appearance here of Ralph Man-heim's much-praised translations of the novels (in 1966, "Death on the Installment Plan"; four years ago. "Castle to Castle"; next week. "North." and not too long from now his last novel, "Rigadon") his reputation as the preeminent seer of the 20th-century apocalypse is unlikely to diminish.

Still, even for those willing for the sake of literary history to understand Celine's erratic politics and overlook his less-thannoble personality, there remains the matter of the anti-Semitic pamphlets, which contain as vile an outpouring of racist garbage as has appeared in a century not overly distinguished for its hygienic approach to questions of race. Words do count; Céline himself acknowledged the fact when he wrote that "ail misfortunes arise from one superfluous word." So if his novels have established him as an angel, albeit a damned one, the pamphlets have secured him a niche in the lowest regions of hell. And one wonders

where to seek him on Judgment

Such reflections, which are scarcely original (see Jean-Paul Sartre's "Portrait de l'Antisemite" or George Steiner's essay "Cry Havoc" in his collection titled Extraterritorial"), may not seem appropriate to a judgment of Erika Octrovsky's "Voyeur Voyant: A Portrait of Louis-Ferdinand Celine." After all. Prof. Ostrovsky-who teaches French literature at New York University and is the author of "Céline and His Vision." the first critical study of the writer to appear in English—has not attempted an explanation or a judgment but rather a portrait of Céline, an evocation of his life and character and personal hell. And there is much to be said for her book. She has certainly succeeded in evolting Celine: one reads her portrait in an almost feverish state of agitation. Yet she has also managed to include much solid biographical data, including such a pertinent detail as the fact that, contrary to continuing popular myth, Celine did not sustain head wounds during World War I (and was therefore not mad for physical reasons) Moreover, she has accomplished all this through an approach to biography that is boldly original. Instead of proceeding cantiously from facts arranged chronologically to tentative interpretations, she has plunged in directly and

IF ever there was a case to be built her portrait from her suboffered in support of Plato's ject's own words (plucked from his various writings), the testi-mony of his acquaintances and relatives (mainly his second wife, the ballet dancer Lucette Almanzor, whom Prof. Ostrovsky interviewed at length), and, perhaps most of all, her own subjective verbal responses. The singular advantage of this impressionistic, almost liquid technique is that Céline's charac-ter and life are defined in their own terms (plus of course Prof. Ostrovsky's sympathetic response) Indeed, one is almost tempted to ask while reading the book, by what other terms is he to be detined?

But there are also drawbacks to Prof. Ostrovsky's approach, and while they seem compara-tively minor at first, one begins to wonder as one reflects. For instance, I found myself continually turning to the back of the book to check the key to the abbreviated references, the chapter notes and the compact chronology of Céline's life (an awkward exercise, demanding four fingers and some loss of blood circulation). At first I assumed this to be a mere clinging to the security of facts on my part, a selfish unwillingness to give over to Prof. Ostrovsky's imagination.

For instance, I was occasionally bothered by her verbal contri-vances ("—Sing a song of death walls, a pocketful of cyanide swarm of ravens, trapped in fire. Of a king who was in his Baltic hut, counting out his days; a queen in her leotard, wearing out her shoes..."; not to mention her sometimes overstrained attempts at symbol-gathering ("In recess [of Celine's last home; after it had been gutted by a fire], a monumental tollet stood intact. Mute excremental witnest."). At first I assumed that's on an experimental trip like.
"Voyeur Voyant," you can't win; them all

When one has finished the book however, one begins to ask one self what it all adds up to In particular, one asks oneself jus what it was that made Celine tick. And in very particular, one construction on wondering about the anti-Semitism and those execuable pamphlets.

Prof. Ostrovsky's treatment of the pamphlets and the trip to Germany in 1944 is nice, logical within the hermetic world she has created, eloquent even, withi its references to shattered mist rors, delicions evil, dread of "the other." But will it really do ex Out cept in its literary terms? One wonders. Not quite, for even in a book that attempts to avoid judgment, judgment must lie be Tim neath the surface. And one is finally forced to the conclusion; that either Plato, as well as the ... French government (in a decision; that was subsequently reversed), was right to banish the poet from the Republic or that Prof. Ostrov sky has written her book in a state of romantic ecstasy thence the strained effects) and has failed to touch the heart of the matter.

German Threat Poses Questions for England

By Brian Glanville

LONDON, Jan, 18 (IHT),-In 1901, Germany became the first foreign country ever to send its national team to England was beaten, 12-0, at Tottenham by an England team made up of amateurs and 10-0, at Manchester, by professionals. The Germans, understandably, do not include these results in their official records, The English, quite as com-prehensibly, do. It was another 67 years before Germany at last managed to beat England in an international match—at Hanover, with a deflected shot by the illustrious Franz Beckenbauer. Two years later, in the World Cup quarterfinals at Leon, Mexico, West Germany had revenge for its defeat by England in the World Cup Final of 1966. The Germans turn-ed a 2-0 deficit and what appeared sure defeat into a 3-2 victory, helped by goalkeeping errors by the late English replacement, Peter Bonetti England, which must now play West Germany in the quarter-finals of the European Nations Cup, can console itself that at least the astonishing Gordon Banks, its first choice, will not fall foul of a bottle of Merdean beer, as he did in Leon. There is little other consolation, Though they no longer have the inextinguishable, talismanic Uwe Seeler to spring about in the goal area, the West Germans look as good, sharp and well balanced as ever. England does not. Its last three international appearances have been gray, sorry affairs, largely void of flair and excitement. Team manager Sir Alf Ramsey still holds the belief of his men but seems unable to vary his obsolete tactics and unwilling to give new

Equally Drab

True, West Germany looked equally drab in its own most recent game, a scoreless tie at home to Poland. But that was a European Nations qualifying game which meant nothing, for the good reason that the Germans had already qualified. Besides, Gunter Netzer wasn't playing; and thereby hangs a tail. Netzer, tall and blond, a Viking in movement and appearance, is the dominant and dominating midfield player of the champion Bundesliga of Borussia Moenchen-Gladbach. He is inventive, fluent, and a beautiful kicker of "dead" ball, whether it be at corner kicks or free kicks-which he directs at the goal like projectiles. But there are two other dominating players in the German team — Beckenbauer, the elegant halfback and best player in the country, between whom and Netzer no love at all is said to be lost: and Wolfgang Overath. a star inside-forward in Mexico,

Bodell Told to Fight

LONDON, Jan. 18 (UPI) .- The British Boxing Board of Control has ordered Jack Bodell to defend his British heavyweight title against Dan McAlinden by May 10. Bodell lost the ropean title to Spain's Jose Manuel Ibar Urtain in December. Mc-Alinden has a 23-1 won-lost

Just as Ferruccio Valenreggi, the Italian team manager, must wondering anxiously whether or not to risk a few of the gifted young Juventus players in his side a match against the feeble League of Ireland is scarcely an adequate proving ground-so Ramsey must decide whether to turn to such players as Rodney Marsh, the Queens Park Rangers center-forward, and Alan Hudson, the young Chelsea phenomenon. The trouble with picking successful club players for the international team is that, so to speak, you never know until they've got there. Will they freeze up, lack-ing the so called "big match tem-perament," and show none of the form which initially had them selected? In Marsh's case it seems unlikely, given his irrepressible Cockney temperament and his delight in showing off his dazzling parlor tricks. But since all Ramsey has so far permitted him is an eight-minute appearance a substitute against the Swiss at Wembley, who can tell?

Hudson, maryelous at 18, is now 20 and has in the meantime had his vertiginous ups and downs. This was partly due to severe injury, partly to the traumas endemic in the situation of a poor boy who suddenly got rich and famous. His lively and likeable father remains the great influence on his play. At his creative best, he could give England the flair it has so sadly lacked for so long. But dare Ramsey take

New York, Yes!

By Russell Baker

New York. Everything was gigantic, overstated, melodramatic, infuriating, magnificent and incomparable, including the price of meals in restaurants. After a long term in Washington, it was momentarily quite wonderful -a little intoxicating, as the anarchy of freedom must be to a man fresh out of prison, The atmosphere of Washington these days is

Baker compounded of gray and cement, The virtues most respected are coldness of eye and heart. The persons most admired are those who can pass a federal security check, which is to say, persons superbly qualified to be floorwalkers and prison guards. From New York, where life is one excess after another, the miasmic truth about Washington becomes apparent by the contrast.

At the foot of Manhattan, New York is driving two immense pillars right into the alto-cumulus. They are called the World Trade Center, and they seem to go on and on and on endlessly in the upward dimension, as though being constructed by battalioos of exuberantly unstoppable madmen determined to keep building until the architect decides what kind of top he wants on his towers.

Apparently he cannot make op his mind. At present his towers simply come to dumb, irrelevant, pointless halts at a meaningless altitude along the main airlane from Boston to Atlanta.

What a contrast to Washington's big construction project of the moment, the FBI building on Pennsylvania Ave.

For months extending back-ward into years, workmen have been toiling at this vast monument to detection; By comparison, the Great Pyramid was a child's sand castle. Its cost will exceed $100 million. Its sprawl would dwarf the entire city of London, Indeed, not since the Pentagon has the federal bureaucracy treated itself to such grandiose housing.

And yet this cop's dream of paradise—this Copagon on the Potomac—is scarcely noticeable to WASHINGTON.-We went to the casual tourist because characteristically for Washington, the bulk of the construction lies underground.

> Washington expresses itself with caves for the FBI and sealed television studios where it can make its own light. New York reaches up for the sunlight and places its secretaries at desks between the clouds where they can flirt with passing airline pilots and unorthodox ideas.

New Yorkers will hear nothing good said of the city. They are drunk on the notion of their own heroism. New York, they assure you, is a nightmare. Over the dinner table they compete in horror stories. The lives they lead, they assure you, are filled with threat of dreadful death, spiritual decay, insupportable discomfort, economic desperation and acute noncollection of gar-

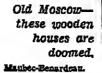

And indeed, there is a certain heroism involved in enduring in New York. The noise alone is a solid physical assault force that must hasten many into madriess.

There is in New York, for example, a vehicle designed to create noise of an intensity that might drive men to kill. The custom, apparently, is to operate this vehicle under a hotel window at 3:30 in the morning. It seems to require heavy feedings of garbage and trash to sustain it and these, in turn, require its operators to open and close its great steel maw with much clanging and banging.

The vehicle makes distinctive sounds for a variety of dining processes: the chewing of the garbage, the swallowing, an ex-cruciatingly high-pitched whine apparently indicating peristalsis, and a dreadful low roar signifying either a belch or contented

This sort of thing, naturally, promotes hot temper among New Yorkers. Most of them seem able to cool themselves by abusing Mayor John V. Lindsay. Others telephone radio programs, which exist for the purpose, and fill the air with rage and vituperation. A few desperate cases require gunplay.

Back here in Washington, the memory nevertheless is sweet. Maybe that is because way down in the rock here there is the faint sound of jackhammers, getting fainter every day.

A New Look For Moscow

By Peter J. Shaw

MOSCOW (UPI).—Say goodbye to the tsarist-era log house. Moscow is to become a model Communist city hy the Tourists may miss the wooden homes, Muscovites, knowledgeable about the lack of running water and other discomforts within, probably won't. Some of the minute, onion-domed churches sprouting in the architectural wasteland will survive as pleasant artifacts of prerevolutionary Russia.

The new master plan for the development of Moscow protects history and ecology. A ban on industrial construction and enlargement of an already vast green belt will combat polintion. What will the Soviet capital look like Mikhail Posokhin, Moscow's chief architect, says: "The city will be an original hiend of the lively thoroughfares and squares with the quiet lanes and side streets of old Moscow. The relics of old architecture and whatever the genius of the Russian people created will be carefully preserved." Implementation of the plan, approved by the Soviet Communist party and government, has begun. Its goals are a utopia of modern city planning.

"To make Moscow a model Communist city is the bounden duty of the entire Soviet people," General Secretary Leonid I Brezhnev told the 24th Communist party congress last spring.

The plan bars new industry of any kind within a radius of three miles from the Kremlin, the traditional city center. Some 200 existing enterprises will be scrapped or rebuilt to conform to contemporary social and ecological needs.

The plan calls for demolition of all dilapidated and ill-equipped housing and the preservation of "the historical and architectural image of Moscow."

The city limits will be frozen and the population, currently fust over seven miltion, will be held to no more than 7.5 million. Authorities govern who can and cannot live in Moscow and other major Soviet cities. The forest-park zone ringing the city limits is now 440,000 acres—almost twice the size of Moscow itself. The plan calls for expanding the zone to 587,500 acres.

A typical log house.

"The city's economy will develop through the reconstruction and re-equipping of existing enterprises, the introduction of modern achievements in science and technology and of progressive techniques," Mr. Posokhin said.

The capital is to be divided into eight zooes radiating from the Kremlin, the brick-walled fortress which has been the hub of Muscovy since Prince Yuri Dolgoruky founded the city in 1147. Each zone will have a population of 600,000 to one million plus well-balanced conditions for work, everyday living and rest," Mr. Posokhin said.

Another 500,000 persons will live in the forest-park zone.

The plan aims to increase housing construction to the point where "each Moscow family has a separate flat with as many rooms as the number of adults in the family."

This means builders must construct 66 million equare yards of housing space over the next two decades if communal dwelling -even in new buildings-is to be elimi-

Most apartment houses will be nine to 16 stories high. Outlying areas may have blocks reaching up to 25 stories if architects deem them compatible with surrounding development.

Public transport and roadway improvements should make no home-to-work journey within Moscow longer than 30 to 35 minutes. Rents, among the lowest in the world, will continue to be five to six percent of the family budget.

"The plan will retain Moscow's original charm of an ancient Russian city," Mr. Posokhin said. "More than 1,500 architectural monuments reminiscent of Moscow's eight centuries will be preserved."

Hassan Bin Yosoff says "it's a she was overwhelmed by her strange feeling" to know he's first visit to China. Miss Kwan going to be a father. Not surprising. Hassan is 106 years old visiting film studies in Shanghai and got married for the first time two years ago. His wife, Medah, specially selected by matchmaker friends, is 80 years younger. Tok Hassan, as he is known to villagers in Alor Star, 230 miles north of Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, said he had been too busy before to think of marriage. It was only when he was 104, he said, that "suddenly I saw myself as I really was-old and without anybody to look after Friends acted as matchmaker. From six girls they chose he selected Medah, who now takes care of the household and paddy land Hassan leases. Comments Medah: "I don't feel he is really all that old—he doesn't seem more than 80."

Elsewhere in Malaysia, women on the rubber and palm oil plantations have had a sudden surge of pregnancies since their husbands were sterilized, the National Family Planning Board reported. A board spokesman said "vasectomy has recently be-come more popular with males on the plantations. As a result the women have become more promiscuous. Once their busbands are sterilized, they believe they cannot get pregnant. Con-sequently they hegin to enjoy sex with other men." The spokesman said the board now plans to disseminate information about the facts of life along with contraceptives and sterilization of-

Nancy Kwan, the Hong Kong-born actress whose most famous role was as a lovelorn prostitute in the film, "The World of Suzie Wong," said in Shanghai that

"It's so interesting and so overwhelming." she said as she watched busy junks and steamers on the Whangpoo River. Sho said she had discussed film techniques and was impressed by the way Chinese actresses went out to work among people in the countryside to gain experience for their roles. One of the things she liked most about Shanghai, she said, was the city center clock which chimed out
